and help the environment?

Friends of Nore Barn Woods at work

Living as you do in the vicinity of the shoreline and the woods, and probably being regular walkers, why not become a FONBW member? Help support us in the work we are doing to preserve, maintain and enhance this very special and much loved coastline for the wildlife, both indigenous and during the annual migration, as well as for your enjoyment too.

Just one morning a month makes a difference!

Volunteers are the key to the work carried out in the woods – and we are actively looking for more to join us on our monthly workdays. We would love you and your family to become volunteers.

Without the workdays, Nore Barn Woods would be overrun by brambles, holly, ivy and nettles and the hedgerows would similarly be affected as would the wildlife because of the deterioration in the diversity of trees, shrubs and plants.

Our workdays are monthly, on the second Saturday of the month, meeting up at the shore end of Warblington Road at 9.30am. We finish about 12 noon. You may well have seen us with our wheelbarrows, forks, rakes and loppers!

FONBW is keen to give nature a chance to flourish and the clearance work is carefully managed to allow not only wildlife but also native wild flowers and trees to inhabit the woods unhindered by more invasive plants.

This past year has seen much work being carried out 1-1%, the rrrminuti vnlNntaarc nrimariki with mntin lino improvements to the Wayfarers Walk hedge, clearing back brambles and planting saplings along part of the hedge to the west of the woods and latterly increasing the variety of planting on the south side, including some layering to create better protection of the woods from the seaward side.

An increase in footfall from walkers has shown FONBW how vital it is to maintain the paths through and around the woods and alerting visitors, via the noticeboards, to the importance of not disturbing the wildlife, particularly when the tide is out and the mudflats are alive with birds feeding

The website gives more information keeping you up to date on FONBW work and containing photographs to illustrate how the woods are being cared for. Membership is £3 per household per annum and details on how to become a Friend of Nore Barn Woods is on the reverse of this introductory leaflet.
